In July 1990, I attended my first Hymn Society annual conference, held that year in Charleston, SC. I shall never forget my first hymn festival when I sank to my pew after the first phrase of the opening hymn, “Come, We That Love the Lord,” too overcome and overwhelmed to continue singing. That conference contained many “firsts” and highlights for me. One in particular was an afternoon plenary session of new hymns presented by Sylvia G. Dunstan. I had only recently grasped that living, breathing individuals were writing hymns today. And here was one of them in the flesh!

The Charleston conference had an apparent impact on Sylvia as well. It led directly to the publication of her hymns and inspired her to write new ones. In her notes about the text in this column, she tells us that it was there that she first became acquainted with the tunes of the Southern Harmony. She writes: “After the conference, some of us vacationed at Folly Beach outside Charleston, where I worked out this text, wandering up and down the beach singing HOLY MANNA.”

“All Who Hunger, Gather Gladly” is an exquisite text of invitation which entwines first and second testament references of manna in the wilderness and strong eucharistic imagery, and then urges the singer/reader/hearer to experience firsthand the ultimate sensation: “Taste and see that God is good.” (Psalm 34)
The hymn writing world still mourns the loss of this wonderful writer who died just three years later at the age of 38. I deeply regret that I never actually met her.

On a day in 1996 I had set about to compose a tune for another text. The tune you see here began to emerge in response to that text, but it soon became apparent as it unfolded that it was not befitting the poem’s introspective, contemplative nature. This tune, rather, built on rising fourths (and one fifth), pushed its way so wide open and strong that it begged for words of invitation, openness, and joy. Although my tune is a far cry from Sylvia’s inspiration, HOLY MANNA, I knew when I rediscovered her text, that, if only in my own mind, I had found a match.

This hymn should be performed within the range of \( J = 70-78 \), with my preference for the upper end, and always with a sense of a broad, legato melodic line. The accompaniment, however, should be buoyant. Although it is a unison tune, surely the last four and a half bars, beginning “Taste and see the grace eternal,” can be sung in parts if desired, with tenor and alto divisi.

I call this tune SHALLOWFORD in honor of Shallowford Presbyterian Church in Lewisville, NC, where I have been a member for 11 years. Since its writing, it has become a part of this congregation’s repertoire of communion hymns.

Sally Ann Morris is a hymn tune composer who lives and works in Lewisville, NC. Her tune collection, Giving Thanks in Song and Prayer, was published in 1998 by GIA Publications.

---

Your Essential Guide to the Musical Aspects of Worship

Worship Music

A Concise Dictionary

Edward Foley, Capuchin, General Editor

Mark Baggett, Carol Doran, Velva Wilson-Goslin, Mark Kilborn, David Pidrane, and Rebecca Slough, Consultants

Numerical in scope and cross-cultural in its perspective, Worship Music focuses on the worship music of English-speaking North Americans. Its over 2,500 entries range across every major denomination within Western Christianity, the Byzantine/Slav tradition, and Judaism.

0-8146-5889-X Hardcover, 352 pp. 6 x 9. $45.00

www.catalog.litpress.org/detail.cfm?ID = 1930

"...it should be in every church musician's library."

Brook W. Dowward
President, Presbyterian Association of Musicians

"Concise, yet comprehensive, this dictionary is easy to use, thanks to abundant cross references and selective bibliographies. It deserves a place in libraries, churches, synagogues, and homes."

Carol A. Pemberton
Editor, The Hymn

At bookstore or
1-800-858-5450 • www.litpress.org

THE LITURGISICAL PRESS
P.O. Box 7000, Collegeville, PA 19426-7000

Vol. 51, No. 3 • July 2000